ABOUT THE DAY

Oxford Economics will present its twenty-fourth five year forecast for the UK hydraulics and pneumatics industries to members of the BFPA and BFPDA at the University of Warwick in Coventry on 11 October 2017. Jeremy Leonard, Director of Industry Services, will provide an overview of the world economy and key trends for the industry sectors affecting fluid power, and present Oxford Economics' latest 2017-2021 UK fluid power forecast in two sessions (with a coffee break in between). Dr. Nick Mallinson, Programme Manager of the WMG (Warwick Manufacturing Group) HVM Catapult will then give an overview of the work taking place at the WMG site at the University of Warwick. There will also be an opportunity to have a tour some of some of the WMG research buildings, which is one of the UK's Catapult Centres promoting high value manufacturing, with particular focus on: automotive, aerospace and defence, business, construction, energy and utilities, food and drink, healthcare, IT, security and rail. After the tour there will be a carvery lunch available. The final presentation after lunch will be from BEIS on the latest developments in the Governments' Industrial Strategy. Every company registering for the event will receive an electronic copy of the 2017-2021 Fluid Power Forecast immediately after the event and free monthly economic updates for the following twelve months in the form of Oxford Economics' "World Economic Prospects" bulletin (October 2017 to September 2018).(October 2016 - September 2017).
